I haven't done PHP seriously in a very long time. Laravel is basically PHP on Rails.

It isthemostadvancedopen-sourcedatabaseavailable. In my opinion, just a fraction of them actually deserves that title. More and more companies are using LAMP as an alternative to expensive proprietary software stacks because of its lower cost and freedom from lock-in. Continueshopping.NET is absent, despite their quality tools that run on Windows. The complexity still has to exist somewhere, right?
